“ I bought this for our 12 year old epileptic dog border collie. She doesn't handle other flea & tick collars well, too many harsh chemicals. This one has worked great all summer long, no fleas, no ticks.

The holiday season is here and for many the rising cost of...well...everything...may be cutting into your celebrations. And that is no exception when it comes to caring for your fur babies either. The "petflation" of food, toys and even essentials like day care and vet bills are rapidly rising and that's enough to make you want to hide under the bed...ok...maybe that's just your dog!

At Alzoo, we have some simple steps to alleviate some of the financial pressure this season, like making homemade treats and food, trim nails and fur at home or even let coats grow out a little more between grooming and bathing your dog at home,

Most pet stores will charge you at least $30 or $40 just to give your dog a bath. If you get a nail trim, ear cleaning, grooming, etc, those totals can go up to $100 or more.

A home bath can save you a lot of money and time and build a closer bond with your furry friend.

Jean-Pierre Lautier, DVM at AB7/Alzoo has these suggestions and tips for bathing at home:

Human hygiene habits make us think that we are doing the right thing by giving a bath to our furry companion, if not every day, at least once a week. This is a mistake.

In nature, canines do not take baths, and especially not with aggressive products like harsh shampoos. Dogs have a much more fragile skin than humans. The dog's skin has only five protective layers, whereas the human skin has nine.

You should therefore limit the frequency of dog baths to one per month, at the most. Between baths, there are other hygiene products, such as no-rinse lotions, or dry shampoos that clean a bit of dirt off and sanitize the coat without having to wet the dog.

You can wash your dog with just water to cool him down or rinse him off after he's been in the ocean, for example, as often as you want. The important thing is to not use shampoo or soap.

However, sometimes a good bath is essential for the well-being of the dog... and his family, but what is the best way to go about it?

- If the weather is warm enough and you have a garden, wash your companion in a basin or a tub of adequate size. Otherwise, the bathtub in the bathroom will do the trick. Dogs aren't always enthusiastic about the idea of being cleaned. You have to be gentle and persuasive. A great trick is bring a toy in with him or even smear some peanut butter on the wall to distract him and keep him busy.
- Have one or two large towels handy to dry the dog. Be careful: after the bath, your dog will naturally want to shake himself to get rid of the excess water. Dress accordingly!
- Remember to place an absorbent cloth such as a mop or towel at the bottom of the tub or bathtub and on the bathroom floor to prevent your dog from slipping.
- If using the shower, the water should be lukewarm, not too hot or too cold, and keep the pressure mild. The idea is not to "spray the dog" but to put the shower head directly in contact with the hair to deeply soak it. Talk to your dog and pet him to reassure him.

Then apply a good soft shampoo, such as Alzoo's new all-natural shampoos or our dry concentrate shampoo which you mix at home. Alzoo shampoos are Paraben-free, dye-free, sulfate-free, without synthetic perfumes and pH balanced for dogs and come in puppy, anti-itch, hypoallergenic and a 2-in-1 so you can select the one that works best for your pup.

Avoid products with harsh ingredients like lauryl ether sulfate. Put the shampoo along the line of your dog's back and massage the hair to obtain a good lather on the whole surface. Avoid the eyes, nose and mouth. For delicate areas, you can pour a small amount of shampoo in the palm of your hand and apply it directly.

- Massage for a minute or two and then rinse off the shampoo, always holding the shower head in contact with the hair. And repeat as it is important that the water runs clear to ensure there is no trace of shampoo left.

- With your hands, try to remove as much water as possible by pressing the fur. Your dog will naturally shake itself.

- Dry your dog's hair vigorously. This is very important because as it dries naturally, the evaporation of water can cool it down and he can catch a cold. This is especially true if the dog dries quickly in the sun. This will also prevent him from drying himself by rubbing himself on the living room couch or in the dust, which happens if the dog is left wet in the garden!

- One last brush and your dog is clean!

The natural products Alzoo offers is a complete line of flea and tick solutions, calming products, grooming goods and more. Most of the lineup is made in the U.S. and the company is in the process of certification to earn B Corporation Certification status. In addition, the company recently switched its structure to be classified as a Benefit Corporation.

"As a company that aims to be a force for good in the world – creating products that make a positive, direct impact on people, their pets and the community they live in, becoming a Benefit Corporation was the natural step forward for Alzoo," said Alzoo CEO, Philippe Chelle. "Benefit Corporations must commit to high standards, purpose, accountability and transparency surrounding all its operations – standards we are proud, and have always been proud, to uphold."

Personal review of Alzoo shampoo

When the company learned we had three dogs and four cats, they sent a gift box of samples to try. We received each of the five shampoos, a calming diffuser and flea collars.

Since we recently used another flea treatment, I haven't tried the collars but noticed they are waterproof, which is nice for our hunting dogs. Plus, the cat collars are equipped with a breakaway safety system so they don't choke if they get hung up. Flea collars are intended for dogs and cats over four months of age.

We used the shampoos on all three dogs on the last of the somewhat sunny days before the fall rain settled in. The bottles are easy to grip, even with wet hands. They are durable in construction and look like they could handle a few inevitable drops should they occur.

The scents are well balanced. The fragrance lingers with a freshness that erases the typical overpowering wet dog smell. I'm very scent sensitive and didn't find these to be overwhelming at all. They are subtle, but noticeable. Walking into the room with three freshly-bathed dogs just smelled clean. Trust me, that's rare in my house. My daughter and I both have a sensitivity to lavender so we didn't use the puppy formula. I'll pay that one forward in my community. The others have some odd names, but I found the palmarosa and rice milk fragrances quite pleasant.

We have large dogs, ranging in size from 45 to about 75 pounds. They are German Shorthaired Pointers so their fur is short. Even with little fur, it required a healthy palmful of shampoo to do the job. I felt like it was a reasonable amount.

The shampoo applied nicely, spreading around with a standard amount of water on the pet. It's not a frothy, sudsy shampoo. There are a small amount of suds so you can tell where you've washed, but don't expect bubbles to fly.

My favorite aspect of the shampoos is the clean rinse. The dogs weren't crazy about being under the hose so a quick rinse is appreciated. It didn't take long to remove all the shampoo and it didn't leave any residue behind.

Flea products

The company designed a line of products that are safe for your pet, yet effective for flea control. The flea collars offer four months of protection against fleas, ticks, and lice. The active ingredients are peppermint oil and cedarwood oil. There's also a flea and tick spray that can be applied directly to the dog's coat for an added layer of protection against fleas, ticks, sand flies and even mosquitos. Alzoo couples these products with a flea and tick shampoo as well as a powder. Follow the directions for introducing your pet to these products so you can monitor for an allergic reaction.

Calming aids

We all know animals can get a bit worked up if left alone or when fireworks are going off in the neighborhood. Alzoo uses a combination of anxiety-reducing ingredients like hemp extract and essential oils in its line of sprays, collars and room diffusers for both cats and dogs.

Deodorizers

Alzoo understands litter boxes could benefit from a little scent improvement, but no one wants to mask one bad scent with a chemical smell. Instead it offers lavender, ocean breeze, island paradise and sweet vanilla. It also created a deodorizer for the chicken coop. To correct bad behavior, there is also a stain and odor training spray.

Shampoos

Alzoo offers a line of shampoos, each designed to address common issues. There's a plant-based shampoo and conditioner in one and an anti-itch blend to address dry, itchy skin. A gentler puppy formula cleans and conditions and a hypoallergenic option cleans sensitive skin. All of these eight-ounce products are delivered in a sugar-cane-based tube that is recyclable. All shampoos are free of sulfates, paraben, dyes, soap, phthalate and synthetic perfumes. Alzoo shampoos are pH balanced and cruelty free.

Additionally, the company offers a dry shampoo powder. It comes in a small package to reduce shipping size and weight. Combine the shampoo with water in the endlessly reusable recycled-aluminum bottle. The bottle is also recyclable at the end of its useful life.

6 Best Mosquito Repellents for Dogs

Mosquitoes aren't just a nuisance to us humans, they can bother and bite your pup, too.

Mosquitoes are particularly active at dusk and when the temperature rises above 80 degrees, but they can be a nuisance any time the weather climbs over 50 degrees. This makes mosquitoes a yearlong issue for many places in the United States, so keeping yourself and your dog protected is a must. After all, mosquito bites are not only irritating but also potentially dangerous.

Here's what you need to know about how to protect dogs from mosquito bites, along with the best mosquito repellents to keep pests away.

Do Mosquitoes Bite Dogs?

Yes, mosquitoes bite dogs. And they don't just leave behind itchy skin. "Mosquitoes are an important vector for multiple infectious diseases, such as heartworm disease in dogs and West Nile Virus in humans," says Dr. Gabby Pagana, an integrative veterinarian. "In fact, the mosquito is essential in the heartworm life cycle; without it, the heartworm larvae would not develop."

Keeping dogs protected from both mosquitoes and their diseases requires a dual approach. "Internal and external protection from heartworms is key," says Dr. Hunter Finn, veterinarian and founder of Pet Method veterinary clinic. "Internal heartworm prevention (such as Heartgard) is something that I recommend for all my clients, but for clients in heartworm hot zones or areas with higher mosquito populations, you may need to use an EPA-registered mosquito repellent."

A preventative will keep your pet safe from heartworm, but it doesn't keep mosquitoes from being a nuisance to dogs. Dogs aren't immune to the bothersome, itchy welts that mosquito bites leave behind. With that said, mosquito repellents designed for humans should never be used on dogs. Instead, look for repellents specifically designed for canines.

Depending on how much protection your dog needs, it can be combined with other repellent products from the brand. And there's no need to worry about rain or a quick swim since the collar is waterproof. There are different collars based on your dog's size, so keep in mind your pet's weight when purchasing the product.

Highlights:

- Repels fleas, ticks, and mosquitoes

TWO PET INDUSTRY TRENDS THAT PET OWNERS NEED TO KNOW ABOUT

Two Pet Industry Trends That Pet Owners Need to Know About

Pets are part of the family. Pets are wellness companions, protectors, or best friends, sometimes all three. As a result, people are spending more money on their pets, and this is reflected in the growing pet industry. The increasing pet spending trends are not just limited to food and treats, but the overall theme of pet health and wellness.

In terms of pet supplementation, pet owners want the best life for their pets and that includes having them live as long as possible. Moreover, the COVID-19 pandemic continues to teach us we need to be as healthy as possible.

And that applies to our pets, too. Regarding Sustainability, we, especially Millennials, recognize that we need to preserve our planet and our resources for future generations, but also a healthier life and a healthier planet. As a result, we need to implement sustainability practices into our lifestyle and support Companies that strive to create sustainable products and implement sustainable practices in their companies.

Another is to use healthier and sustainable shampoos to clean our dogs. Many shampoos are filled with chemicals and detergents that are not necessarily good for our dogs' skin and coat or the planet. Alzoo's Dry Concentrated conditioning shampoo reflects the company's continual focus on doing better for the environment while creating an excellent delivery system. Formulated with environmentally friendly, safe ingredients such as botanical cleansers and essential oils, the new conditioning shampoos are Paraben-free, dye-free, sulfate-free, and pH Balanced for dogs. The package design eliminates the use of plastics, lessens water used in transport, and further reduces the carbon footprint while also reducing costs for pet parents. They even have their own reusable aluminum bottle to mix it in. This conditioning shampoo leaves your pet with a clean, shiny, silky coat that hydrates the skin and helps the planet.

Alzoo's innovative shampoo line makes bath time more efficient, fun, safe, and sustainable. Four new grooming shampoos include: Hypoallergenic, 2-in-1, Anti-Itch, Puppy, all of which use plant-based cleansers and essential oils. Paraben-free, dye-free, sulfate-free, and pH Balanced for dogs. Each product is packaged in an easy-to-squeeze, innovative sugar cane-sourced tube. www.alzoo-vet.com

Flea & Tick Prevention

According to the American Kennel Club, Spring and summer is a time when the lure of the great outdoors calls to us and our furry pals. Unfortunately, it also rings in the full-blown season of fleas and ticks.

Whether we do to keep our dogs healthy and protected them, it is impossible to keep them from meowing up with ticks and fleas when they go outside. And unfortunately, these parasites can have a serious effect on your dog's health. There are big benefits to being consistent when protecting our dogs against these pesky parasites.

There are flea and tick preventatives on the market today that are safer and more effective than what was available 10 years ago. Our choices have grown exponentially over the years, however you must always consider the safety of your dog when using a flea and tick preventative. It is best to work with your veterinarian to decide on the right regimen that will fit your pet's age, health, and breed, as well as the environment you live or vacation in. Your vet will also consider whether you have more than one pet, have dogs that bark, or have young children in your household.

That said, Alzoo has many different all-natural repellent options to help manage those pesky fleas and ticks the season for both fur dogs and cats.

Alzoo has all-natural repellents, from collars, to spot on treatments to sprays, to keep your pets safe.

ALZOO products do not contain chemical pesticides, which can be dangerous to apply and harmful if over-used. ALZOO products are designed to be used together to establish an optimum, natural "zone" of repellent protection to protect your pets without chemicals.

USE ALZOO PRODUCTS AS A SYSTEM. THE KEY TO PREVENTION AND FOR MAXIMUM EFFECT IS TO BEGIN USING ALZOO EARLY EVEN BEFORE THE SEASON STARTS. Establish a zone early, ideally 30 days before the season. Create a repellent environment around the home and on just before pets typically begin to bite.

ASK THE EXPERT: THESE 10 DOG-CALMING PRODUCTS WILL HELP SOOTHE ANXIOUS PUPS

Ask the Expert: These 10 Dog-Calming Products Will Help Soothe Anxious Pups

A 2020 Finnish study of almost 14,000 dogs of hundreds of breed mixes found that about 70% of pet dogs display some form of anxiety — fear of sounds, strangers, other dogs and even their own shadow. Even if your dog is calm most of the time, you might worry about how to calm an anxious dog around holidays or during fireworks displays or large gatherings. Thankfully, many dog-calming products, including calming dog beds, are available. To help find the best pet products for pups with anxiety, we spoke to a veterinarian.

"Anti-stress products can help to improve the daily life of animals and their owners. In difficult cases, however, there are other means of action, such as behavioral therapies. Do not hesitate to consult a behavioral specialist (veterinarian or behaviorist)," says Dr. Jean-Pierre Lautier, DVM, of the AB7 Group and Alzoo. "Through a series of simple exercises, behavioral therapies can strengthen the pet-parent-pet relationship and create a climate of trust that limits the reasons for stress. This is especially true for dogs."

But not all dog-calming products are created equally. "Some are made with synthetic pheromones or other natural ingredients," adds Dr. Lautier. "Pet owners should consider whether they want products only for their home, such as a diffuser, or for every situation, such as a spray or collar. They should also consider how lasting their need is. Diffusers and collars are longer lasting while sprays need to be reapplied during specific situations."

HOW TO KNOW IF YOU NEED DOG-CALMING PRODUCTS

"The symptoms of stress are different for each species," says Dr. Lautier. "In dogs, stress results in a wide variety of behaviors. Panting, outside of hot weather, is a fairly common sign. Some dogs express their stress by barking, often repetitively, which can cause neighborhood problems. Others behave aggressively or destructively, tearing apart furniture, clothes, carpets, and doors. Some dogs soil the house with their droppings. Treatment with calming products is appropriate for each case and should be combined with behavioral therapies."

Once you start using dog-calming products, you may wonder how you'll be able to tell whether or not they work. "The effectiveness of calming products is generally reflected in the disappearance or reduction of stress symptoms," explains Dr. Lautier. "For dogs, the symptoms of stress are numerous: barking, destruction in the house, soiling, panting, whining, etc. Calming products reduce these symptoms. You'll see the dog is calmer and more resistant to potential stresses, such as separation from its owners."

Below are some ideas for how to calm an anxious dog and plenty of dog-calming treats and products.

Diffusers are often wall plug-in units with an attached vial or reservoir of liquid ingredients. Electricity warms the liquid, evaporating slowly into the air around it. That liquid vapor and gas slowly spread throughout the space it's in.

Adaptil uses a unique proprietary blend called "canine appeasing pheromone analog" to mimic a mother dog's natural nursing pheromones to help take your dog back to their blissful puppy days. The diffuser isn't recommended as a remedy for hyperactive or aggressive dogs. Still, it is a good fit for calming fears of strangers, loud noises and separation anxiety in your home or office.

The heated diffuser covers up to 700 square feet of space as long as airflow isn't restricted. The manufacturers recommend that you position the diffuser where your dog spends most of their time, such as in the living room, and to avoid plugging the diffuser in under shelves and behind doors, curtains, or furniture, so outflow is not prevented. Generally, it would help if you replaced the vial once a month and the diffuser unit every six months.

ThunderEase Calming Pheromone Diffuser and Alzoo All Natural Calming Diffusers were close runners in this category.

10. ALZOO CALMING COLLAR

When your dog needs calming where ever they go, you'll want to consider a collar. The Alzoo Calming Collar uses a blend of valerian and lavender plant extracts infused directly into the collar. Customers find it a light, soothing scent that's not overpowering.

The ingredients are cruelty-free, and it does not use synthetic pheromones or the harmful polyvinyl chloride or phthalates found in some other brands. Because the ingredients are natural, this collar is safe for your dog to wear daily.

"The Alzoo Calming Collar is long-lasting, more so than a spray," notes Dr. Lautier. "It is more versatile, and it works for any occasion including the car, your home, for vets visits and works where ever your dog is."

Each waterproof collar is effective for up to four weeks, and one size fits most dogs. A bonus is that Alzoo uses recycled and recyclable packaging. If you like the collar, you can also check out the calming spray and diffuser that Dr. Lautier helped develop.

Dog Anxiety: 7 Reasons Your Dog May Be Stressed—and What to Do About It

Top reasons why dogs get anxiety

Dogs are social animals that are highly dependent on their group. In the wild, they're dependent on members of the pack. In domestic bliss, it's humans.

"The reasons for anxiety are often linked to this attachment to the group; dogs are very sensitive to the cohesion of the group," says Jean-Pierre Lautier, DVM, deputy CEO and pharmaceutical manager at pet care company Alzoo. "It is very unusual and very distressing for a dog to be separated from its group." This is why many dogs experience separation anxiety when they are home alone. (By the way, this is how long it is OK to leave your dog home alone.)

On the other hand, dogs that are actively working closely with their humans are much more sensitive to separation, Dr. Lautier says. Hunting breeds require constant interaction with their humans, and they tend to be very affectionate and clingy. "They will be much more sensitive to separation," he explains. That said, they are tolerant and patient and make great dogs for kids and families.

Natural supplements

For more ways to calm an anxious dog without medication, Dr. Lautier, who specializes in pet behavior problems, suggests trying natural substances known for their anxiolytic properties (like the medicines that treat anxiety). "These substances work in the brain by slowing down the breakdown of soothing neurotransmitters," says Dr. Lautier.

Consider trying either a calming plug-in diffuser, anti-stress collar, or calming spray. If you don't see positive results with one product, try another. "Some pets react better to a collar versus a spray or a diffuser versus a collar," he says. "It is important to observe your pet closely to see which has the most calming effect, as each pet and situation are different."

NATURAL PRODUCTS INNOVATION: 5 TRENDS TO WATCH FROM EXPO WEST

Natural Products Innovation: 5 Trends to Watch from Expo West

After a long two years, Natural Products Expo West 2022 was finally back in person and better than ever. The show was full of exciting, better-for-you brands that are revolutionizing the wellness sector, filled with unique ideas and improved functional products. They are being eco-conscious through plant-based ingredients and applying regenerative and sustainable methods to their production and design.

It is certainly an exciting new era for the food and beverage industry. You need to be a business with elements of sustainability, plant-based products, healthier alternatives, convenience, and modern indulgence, otherwise you may not capture the buyer's attention and you may not succeed in these changing times. Verlinvest's Executive Director, Clément Pointillart, shared his thoughts on emerging food and beverage brands: "They are faced with the challenge of not just checking one box, but all of the boxes—offering products in unique and interesting formats that are better for you (mostly) and better for the world. Brands showcasing responsible sourcing, waste reduction, more plants, less sugar, fewer carbs, and optimistic, mission-driven behavior were on display throughout the halls of Expo West."

Co-Founder and Managing Partner of Strategic Sunrise Partners, Vincent Love, said, "It was great to reconnect with everyone—founders, management teams, other investors, etc., after more than two years. The energy was amazing and there were so many exciting brands impacting meaningful change."

Companies are now more transparent with their vision and their goals. The main focus is improving consumers' lifestyles as well as the planet's health.

Just a few of the trends we spotted in the naturals industry that you can expect to see more of in 2022 and beyond:

5) Transparency on the Label

Alzoo, a new brand from natural pet experts with a 50-year heritage in France, introduces natural and effective insect, flea and tick repellents, home and pet cleaners that work, and soothing, calming sprays that keep cats, dogs and horses clean, comfortable and happy.

Trends & Products: Flea and Tick

Battling Pests

Flea and tick products come in a variety of forms, including pills and chews to sprays and food toppers to collars and shampoos. With so many different applications to choose from, it's up to consumers to decide which one is best for their pet. Pet retailers can play a vital role in helping to educate their customers about not only the importance of flea and tick prevention, but also the options that are available to them. Products that are powerful on pests but gentle on the dog or cat will provide relief without causing undue harm to the pets that we serve.

ALZOO

ALZOO is a natural pest repellent brand for dogs, cats and horses which uses gentle formulas and ingredients such as great smelling essential oils, to repel parasites such as fleas, ticks and lice so that they never come in contact with your pet. Laboratory tests have shown active ingredients in ALZOO's products both reduce the incidence and severity of bites.

Dr. Jean-Pierre LAUTIER DMV, Alzoo veterinarian, gives advice to The Spruce Pets on choosing the best cat shampoo

The Best Cat Shampoos of 2022

The best cat shampoo combines safe and high quality ingredients in formulations that are appropriate for your cat's hair type and age. We evaluated a variety of shampoos including liquid, dry, and no-rinse options.

Here are some tips to make bathing easier for you both.

"The ideal is of course to use a shampoo specially formulated for cats," Dr. Jean-Pierre Lautier DVM, who specializes in the research and development of veterinary products for AB7 Group and Alzoo, told The Spruce Pets. "The main thing is to use a shampoo that does not irritate the skin and whose pH is rather neutral."

What to Look for in a Cat Shampoo

To begin, it is best to consider whether or not your cat actually needs a bath. "Cats take great care of their fur and spend a good part of their days on it. For most cats, bathing is not really necessary," says Dr. Lautier. "However, there are exceptions: for example, when the cat is handicapped by pain (old cats are susceptible to arthritis) and can no longer groom itself."

Safety is also a concern when bathing your cat. "Bathing your cat can be an 'athletic' or even painful experience. With very few exceptions, cats do not like water and the bathing experience is extremely stressful for them, which can trigger aggressive behavior," adds Dr. Lautier. "In some extreme cases, it may be necessary to have your veterinarian use a mild sedation before bathing."

Dr. Lautier notes that it is possible to get a cat used to bathing from a young age. "Some owners do this and then bathe their cats regularly without any problems," he adds.

Shampoo Types

There are a number of ways to get your cat clean and fresh smelling. Liquid shampoos are the most common, but you'll also find foam shampoos—some that need to be rinsed out and others that are waterless (no-rinse) and so would be brushed out after a drying period.

"The use of dry shampoos or no-rinse cleansing lotions applied with a cotton ball or absorbent cloth is an interesting alternative to having to wet the cat completely," explains Dr. Lautier.

Most cat shampoos are only appropriate for cats 12 weeks and over, although Burt's Bees says its appropriate for all ages. A few are designed specifically for kittens or cats suffering from allergies to food, fleas or other irritants. Check the label before you buy if your kitten is under 12 weeks.

Several brands of cat shampoo are specifically designed to control fleas and ticks. These will contain pesticide ingredients in addition to the standard shampoo elements. Be sure to carefully use these shampoos as directed to avoid accidental ingestion or eye exposure that could cause more serious side effects.

Ingredients

No matter what ingredients the shampoo contains, avoid contact with their eyes, nose, mouth and inner ears to avoid pain and irritation. Look for natural and organic ingredients that you recognize. Many of these contain ingredients that calm allergies and irritation, including oatmeal, chamomile, aloe vera and nourishing vitamins.

Unless a soapy lather is really important to you, avoid shampoos that contain surfactants, sodium lauryl sulphate and sodium laureth sulphate because, although they help clean deeply, they can also be irritating and are not considered good for the aquatic environment.

Needs for Specific Breeds

"For long-haired breeds, you should use a shampoo that will prevent the formation of knots in the hair and will make brushing easier," notes Dr. Lautier. "Hairless breeds, such as the Sphinx, often have seborrheic skin and require regular bathing. Regular bathing is also common for cats participating in competitions."

Seborrheic dermatitis is a relatively common skin condition caused by the cat's immune system overreacting to yeast that grows naturally on the skin. It can result in scaly patches, red skin and stubborn dandruff. Shampoos designed specifically for this type of dermatitis typically use antifungal ingredients that keep the yeast growth in check.

FAQ

Can you use dog shampoo on cats?

"If shampoo designed for cats is not available, a dog shampoo will do just fine," says Dr. Lautier. "Dog shampoos are also formulated with a neutral pH. Good quality dog shampoos use very gentle cleansing agents that respect the fragile skin of both dogs and cats."

Can you use human shampoo on cats?

"Human shampoos should not be used on cats," asserts Dr. Lautier. "Human skin has an acidic pH and shampoos are formulated accordingly. Besides, human skin is much more resistant and some human shampoos still use washing agents that would be too aggressive for the cat's skin."

Do you have a new fur baby? Here are a few must-buys! And, a few great tips too!

Welcoming Your New Puppy

Adoption is a very stressful ordeal for the puppy who is separated from his siblings and his native environment. It is important to welcome him in a calm and serene environment and to avoid accumulating new things. In the first two weeks, avoid too many visits and contact with other dogs other than those in the house. Around 2 months, the puppy's immune system is still immature and you must give it time to strengthen.

This is our cat Frieda. Her little box used to get stinky, as litter boxes do. Recently though, I was introduced to a product that was designed to keep litter boxes not only deodorized but smelling good too!

Alzoo Cat Litter Deodorizers come a variety of scents that deodorize and perfume cat litter. We keep the litter box in our laundry room which is a pretty small space. We have to pass through the laundry room from the garage to enter our house so it's also a high traffic area. I try to keep the litter box as clean as possible but if you have a cat, you know how it is. The cat litter deodorizer helps a lot! You just sprinkle some on top of the litter and right away, the room is filled with a pleasant fragrance!

Choose from Sweet Vanilla, Island Paradise, Ocean Breeze and Fresh Lavender. My personal favorite is the vanilla. The deodorizer has bactericide action and is super concentrated so you only need a small amount. In fact, there are about 30 uses per 26 oz bottle. I love that this product makes the litter last a bit longer than usual. I've been super busy lately and haven't had time to completely empty the litter box and wash it out. The deodorizer has helped keep the odor down until I get a chance to give it a good cleaning.

Alzoo Pet Products for a Cleaner Home

For Mary's 14th birthday, she really wanted a cat. So as a surprise, we ended up bringing a cat home for her. But that also meant that we now had 5 animals inside the house! Right now we have 4 dogs and 1 cat so keeping the house clean around them sometimes can be a chore. Fortunately I was able to find Alzoo pet products and so far, I am really impressed.

We were able to try out a cat litter deodorizer which is a must have for any cat family, a stain and odor remover for carpets which is a must have for a dog family and a cat calming diffuser which I have been hearing so much about lately! What to know my thoughts on each product we tried? Check out the video below!
