Alzoo

Alzoo shampoos provide a light, naturally derived fragrance that cleans without irritation.

Alzoo is a brand known for making shampoos that provide a light, naturally derived fragrance that cleans without irritation. The brand is planning to showcase three sustainable concentrated shampoos, which follow the same principle of the hypoallergenic shampoo that the brand introduced last year at Global Pet Expo: No single-use plastic, no transport of water, a reduction in cost and CO2 emissions.

Alzoo grooming products have three exceptional features: performance, results and scent.

Alzoo shampoos are superior performers. These gentle formulas clean quickly and thoroughly without having to use excessive product. A light, natural lather disperses throughout the dog's fur, rinsing clean and quickly making bath time much more enjoyable for both the dog and pet parent.

Alzoo asks the question: Why should the benefits of a bath last only a day? Alzoo shampoos impart results that extend beyond bath day. A coat that looks and feels healthier, shine and luster can still be seen days after the bath.

Scent is important, and Alzoo offers a scent that isn't overwhelming. Dogs have sensitive skin, and every ingredient that goes into a formulation can have an effect – both positive and negative.

One product to watch is Alzoo's 2-in-1 shampoo/conditioner for dogs. Thanks to surfactants in the formula, the product cleans dog hair and removes dirt while untangling and moisturizing the hair.

Calm Dog, Happy Dog

Pet owners want to help their anxious pups without medicating them, so they look for solutions at their favorite retailers.

BY NORA CALEY

For many dogs, life is not just a series of ball tosses, treats, and naps. Anxious dogs find much to be concerned about, from thunder and fireworks to unfamiliar humans to scary car rides. Being alone is also stressful, and as more dog owners return to workplaces post-pandemic, their pups are contending with a lack of human contact for hours at a time.

Separation anxiety is not a new phenomenon, but it has been gaining attention lately as the pandemic changed how and where people work. According to a survey by CertaPet, 76 percent of dog owners said their dogs suffer from separation anxiety, and people spend an average of $157 a year replacing items their anxious dogs destroyed. Also, 73 percent of dog owners said they would get another dog if that would help the existing dog feel less anxious.

SUSTAINABLE SOLUTIONS

The rise of CBD products reflects several trends, among them the desire for an alternative to pharmaceutical remedies. That consumer demand also drives interest in other types of plant-based calming aids for dogs. Alzoo Pet Products makes sustainable and science-based products that contain Valerian and Lavandin oil. The Dog Calming Collars are waterproof and effective for up to 30 days. The Calming Plug-In Diffuser covers an area up to 500-square-feet, and the Calming Spray can be sprayed anywhere the dog is.

"The most important innovation right now in the dog calming category are products that contain non-synthetic pheromones or harsh chemicals," says Jamie Knochel, vice president of sales for Alzoo Pet Products.

Retailers can benefit by offering an assortment of products that answer pet owners' desire for chemical-free products. When consumers ask for advice about calming products, the retailer should respond by first finding out what is causing the dog's stress. Then the staff member can recommend an everyday product, such as a chew toy that can help relieve stress and occupy the dog, or calming product to use when the dog is stressed from fireworks, thunderstorm, or separation anxiety.

Why Do Dogs Lick You?

Is It Safe for Dogs to Lick You?

In principle, letting your dog lick you is not particularly hygienic, says Dr. Jeanne-Pierre Lautier, D.V.M., veterinarian and consultant for pet care company AB7 Group/Alzoo.

“Licking can transmit germs from the oral flora but also fecal germs or eggs of intestinal parasites, as the tongue is also used by the dog for his intimate hygiene,” Lautier says.

However, he adds that if the dog is regularly treated against worms, the risks of contracting diseases transmitted by licking the dog remain low.

Tedeschi notes that there are personal and cultural implications to the question of whether you should allow your dog to lick you.

“Some people really don’t appreciate being licked even if it is safe. Others have been taught or raised to be concerned about this behavior based on cultural or religious considerations,” Tedeschi says.

He notes that a healthy dog is not going to make a healthy person ill. That being said, dogs do come in contact with items that can carry oral microbiome, bacteria and viruses such as giardia, a diarrheal disease.

On the flip side, depending on what you’re putting on your skin, as far as lotion and perfumes are concerned, it may not be safe for your dog to be licking you. Medicated creams and some essential oils are actually quite dangerous for dogs to ingest.

Glucosamine For Dogs: Safe Dosages And Uses

By Meera Pal
Contributor

Fact checked by Kelly Anne Smith
Editor

Updated: Oct 31, 2023, 7:51am

What Is Glucosamine Used for in Dogs?

Glucosamine is a naturally-occurring molecule used by the body to help build tendons, ligaments, cartilage and the fluid that surrounds joints.

“As dogs age, their bodies produce less glucosamine, leading to joint degeneration,” says Dr. Jose Huwiler, D.V.M., veterinarian and regulatory affairs manager for pet care company AB7 Group/Alzoo.

“Diseases such as osteoarthritis, trauma and even surgical procedures can also damage the joints, causing pain, inflammation and loss of mobility,” Huwiler says. “Glucosamine supplements can help keep joints healthy and support joint damage.”

Glucosamine is available as a joint-health supplement typically sourced from shellfish.

When Owners Shouldn't Give Glucosamine to Dogs

It's best to talk to your veterinarian if you are considering adding a new supplement to your dog's diet, especially if your dog has underlying health issues or is on any other medication.

“Most glucosamine supplements are made from chitin, the hard outer shell of shrimp, lobster, and crab,” Huwiler says. “Because hypersensitivity reactions may occur, animals that have previously shown hypersensitivity reactions to these compounds or their ingredients should not receive them.”

Glucosamine should not be given to dogs for the following reasons:

- The dog has kidney or liver problems
- The dog is already taking anticoagulants, antidiabetic agents, and doxorubicin
- The dog has a history of seizures

Can Dogs Overdose on Glucosamine?

Yes, dogs can overdose on glucosamine.

“Oral overdose is unlikely to cause significant problems. However, it can occur and result in several risks,” Huwiler says.

Dog owners should look for the followings signs in the case of a glucosamine overdose:

- Vomiting
- Diarrhea
- Loss of appetite
- Lethargy or weakness
- Increased thirst or urination
- Easy bruising or bleeding
- Abdominal distention and/or pain
- Jaundice (yellowing of the eyes or skin)
- Seizures
- Tremors

How Long Does It Take For Glucosamine To Start Working?

It may take a few weeks to a few months for your dog to experience the full effects and gradual improvements associated with taking a glucosamine supplement.

“Supplements should be given for at least 2 to 6 weeks to evaluate how well they may work in your dog,” Huwiler says.

How Long Does Glucosamine Stay in a Dog's System?

Glucosamine can be detected in a dog's blood for up to 48 hours.

“The time that glucosamine remains in the body varies greatly, but it is rapidly absorbed, highly distributed, and efficiently excreted, which is why it should be administered daily,” Huwiler says.
